9. LINK BETWEEN EXCLUSIVE QUALITY, CHARACTERISTICS AND REPUTATION WITH GEOGRAPHICAL AREA

9.1. Natural factors

Climate

Climate formation in the micro-zone Magraani is caused with local relief peculiarity.

The micro-zone Magraani vineyards are cultivated on the Southern and South-Western slopes of Caucasus Range in the gorges of the River Machareuli, Babaneuristskali and Magraanistskali.

The climate is moderately continental, comparably humid with hot summer and long cold winter.

The micro-zone is characterized with high solar radiation, because vineyard areas are directed to the South. Annual duration of sunlight is quite high and more than 2050 hours. Average annual temperature is 12.2-12.4°C. The warmest month is July, and the temperature reaches up to + 40°C, in some years. The coldest month is January, and temperature falls down to -16°C.

The annual sum of atmospheric precipitations averagely varies within 750–850 mm. Precipitations amount and such days deal are helpful for viticulture development in the micro-zone.

The micro-zone is surrounded with slope branches of Caucasus Range from the West, North, and North-East, which has a great influence on this place. Caucasus Range from the North prevents cold air mass spreading. The slopes protect the vineyards from strong winds, and climate in the micro-zone is less windy.

Blowing of cool air from slope forests (Babaneuri State Nature Reserve among them) causes falling down the temperature at hot summer, and has a positive influence on grapes equal and well ripening.

Soil

There are distinguished the following varieties of soils, in the micro-zone:

- Black earth soils – slightly leptosol, quite fertile, alkaline (pH – 7.5-8.2). Humus content in tillage layer is high and varies within 3.88–7.0%;
- Alluvial soils – moderately leptosol, presented on inclined and slightly inclined slopes, and on both banks of the River Machareuli, as well. Said soils features and geographical disposition creates the best conditions for vine variety – Kisi cultivation;
- Brown soils – slightly clay, quite leptosol, characterized with high natural fertility. Local vineyards give opportunity to produce high quality wines.

9.2. Human Factor

Viticulture and winemaking have taken place from ancient times in micro-zone villages and were main local business even from Eneolithic period. Presence of ancient cellars, winepresses, "Qvevri"-s saved in the village Magraani disposed in Machareuli Gorge and very old vines from former vineyards disposed on the slopes adjusting Magraani Castle is a confirmation of this fact.

The River Machareuli same – "Machar-reuli" divides the village Magraani into two equal parts. In accordance with local legend the river name has link with the evidence – when "Machari" (not wholly fermented wine) overflowed from the winepress, it was mixed with the river.

In the beginning of the XX century the vine variety "Kisi Magraani" was lost. In accordance with the legend the vine was saved by the farmer from Magraani who find broth on the bank by flooded river the tree with the vine climbed thereon; he has cut the stems of vine and planted them just for interest, after that the variety was spread among local vinedressers.

In accordance with D. Tabidze, 1954, vine "Magranuli" same – "Kisi Magraani" was cultivated in the territory of four villages: Magraani, Argokhi, Pichkhovani, and a little amount – in Babaneuri.

In the times of communism this variety was not spread because of small yield, and more harvested varieties were popular, so saving the variety Kisi is a deserve exclusively of local population.

Now said variety is cultivated even outside of Appellation of Origin area; and it shows the best features exactly in the place of its historical origin.

At the present, the variety occupies quite large territory, even new vineyards are exceed 100 ha, and their amount increases each year. Viticulture and winemaking is a main business of local population.

In accordance with "Ampelography of Georgia"¹ and D. Tabidze "Kakhetian Vine Varieties"², Kisi is younger than other varieties, but one of Kakhetian traditional variety. Kisi always was naturally mixed with Rkatsiteli and Mtsvane in the vineyards. This variety was in content of wellknown Kakhetian wines together with Khikhvi and Grdzelmtevana, as well, and "often some popular origin wine quality is caused by Kisi in its content".

Also, in accordance with D. Tabidze, variety Kisi exactly was used for the improvement of Rkatsiteli on Alazani left bank, in which vineyards the variety Mtsvane is less spread.

In the XX century at the time of vine diseases the vine Kisi was reduced relative to other varieties. Kisi was not mentioned in Phylloxera Comity Description, 1896³. It was considered as less spread variety, in 1930-s, and as a result of this it was entered into vine standard varieties assortment as quality and even "persective vine variety".

Kakhetian vinedressers and winemakers payed especial attention to Kisi cultivated on the left bank of Alazani. In 1940-s Georgian Viticulture-Winemaking Scientific-Research Institute described Kisi cultivated in the village Magraani, and made decision that this form is different from the same variety cultivated on the right bank. As D. Tabidze noted, exactly this form of variety was named – "Kisi Magraani". In accordance of same author description, this form was mostly spread in the villages: Magraani, Pichkhovani, and a little amount – in Babaneuri"⁴.

Due to its high quality and demand growth with each year the vine Kisi was spread in whole Kakheti. Both forms of this variety – Kisi from both banks exist in new vineyards, but more appreciated is "Kisi Magraani" from the left bank, especially from the micro-zone Magraani.

Geographical location of the micro-zone Magraani, microclimate conditions caused with natural borders, soil varieties, special features of vine variety "Maghranuli" (Kisi Magraani) shown in this place, and local tradition of viticulture and winemaking provide unique exclusive quality of wine "Kisi Magraani".
