Average annual air temperature is 15.4°C.

The sum of active temperatures is 4353.9°C.

Annual total precipitation is 1360.2 mm, of which 698.8 mm falls during vegetation period.

Average annual relative humidity is 71.1%, while the same indicator for vegetation period is 72%.

Soils. The microzone is located in the Eastern part of Imereti lowland, and includes the valleys of Dzusi, Smordoli, Chkhari, Buja and Cholaburi rivers. The most of territory is characterized with flat relief. The soils of microzone are mainly alluvial carbonated. In the Northern part of microzone the yellow soils are found, as well. The soil is loamy and heavy loamy in mechanical composition. In one section, it is characterized with rough texture. The soils are characterized with deep profile, profile thickness varies within 1–1.5 m, and active humus layer is 50–70 cm.

According to morphological characteristics, the alluvial soils are brownish-grey in upper layers, and becoming grey downwards; the structure is coarse-grained and stony. In deeper layers, it is weakly expressed.

Soil reaction is neutral to slightly alkaline – pH is in the range of 5.8-7.6.

Human Factor – Viticulture and winemaking have existed in Imereti since time immemorial, and have always been the main branch of the agricultural activity of the local population.

Despite a number of obstacles the development of viticulture in Imereti had relatively broad prospects from the second half of the 19th century. In 1873, the area of vineyards in Imereti amounted to 19.377 ha, and was steadily increasing. Whole area in 1875 increased to 21.370 ha, and from 1895 – 23.585 ha.

Georgian ampelography states: Otskhanuri Sapere is fairly common Imeretian vine variety, and according to comprehensive vineyard census of 1940, Otskhanuri Sapere occupied a total area of 91 ha, and according to the 1953 census – 112 ha throughout Imereti region.

It should be noted that Imereti is considered as one of the most important winemaking regions. It ranks first in Western Georgia in terms of richness of vine varieties, and area of vineyards. Viticulture is leading agricultural sector in many districts of Imereti.

Imereti wines made from grapes of mountain slopes and inclinations are distinguished with high quality. These wines are generally of moderate strength, characterized with tenderness, subtlety, and distinctive aroma when young, and well-developed bouquet – when aged. Samples of Imereti wine presented by W. Thiebaud at the 1887 World's Fair in Paris, were judged as the best table wine, and awarded with gold medal. These wines were also appreciated and awarded in 1889-1890 in Paris, Bordeaux, Edinburgh, Tbilisi and other cities (V. Thiebaud).¹

Otskhanuri Sapere is particularly distinguished among Imeretian red vine varieties, it originally belongs to Colchis varieties, and with its morphological and economic characteristics, it is included in ecological-geographical group of prol pontic, sub prol. georgica Negr. According to some signs, it is transitional between cultural and wild varieties. Its thickly and deeply lobed lanceolate leaves, small flowers, and highly variable ratio of stamen length to bud height (1 to 2), and small, dense clusters, small, round, unevenly sized berries and fine-grainedness (presence of green, immature berries in ripe black berries) characteristic of variety confirms great age of breed, and its recent introduction into culture from the wild. It is also noteworthy that Otskhanuri Sapere does not normally grow as low-height vineyard; in such conditions, it yields small harvest, therefore, it is grown in more suitable semi-tall form, the so-called olive grove method, during which the variety develops well, and yields bountiful harvest. According to comparative assessment of morphological and economic characteristics, Otskhanuri Sapere appears to be the oldest vine variety. Because of this we think that it has not been introduced into cultural conditions very long ago, and the influence of centuries-old culture (care and maintenance) on the breed is not clearly visible, and it has not changed or improved much compared to its original state. Sugar content and acidity of Otskhanuri Sapere during the harvest in 1939-1950 were tested in Sazano, and it was confirmed that its sugar content ranges from 19.6 to 23.3%, and its acidity is between 7.7-10.4. From these reports it is clear that Otskhanuri Sapere accumulates sufficient sugar for table wine, but it provides the best sugar-acidity ratio in Imereti.² Observations conducted in the 1950s showed that under optimal conditions Otskhanuri Sapere can accumulate sugar content up to 23-24%.³ Currently, this variety for industrial purpose is widespread only in Imereti region. In recent years, high-quality Otskhanuri sapere has been cultivated in this region, The importance thereof as entrepreneurial vine variety was determined as a result of increase in vertical zonality thereof related to global warming making possible to cultivate grapes with high sugar and acidity throughout Imereti, and based on this the production of wine with special qualities. The demand for this wine is growing in the domestic and foreign markets, as well.

Otskhanuri Sapere belongs to standard late-ripening vine varieties. It stands out among Imeretian red grapes: with its high wine quality, intense color, fullness, tenderness, harmonious taste, and freshness. Even 80 years ago, Prof. K. Modebadze noted considerable vitality of ancient wines of this brand, and indicated an improvement of wine taste characteristics during the maturation, and as high-quality variety it has good prospects for middle and upper Imereti districts.³

Otskhanuri Sapere is common vine variety in Zestaponi and Terjola districts.⁴ In other districts of Imereti, it occupies negligible area. According to 1940 general census of vineyards, Otskhanuri Sapere occupied total area of 94 ha, and according to 1953 census, it occupied 112 ha.

This area is unevenly distributed among individual regions. Relatively small distribution of the variety is due to its late maturity and low yield during lowland formation.

Classic viticulture zone includes the valleys of Dzirula, Kvirila, and Rioni rivers.

One of industrial vine varieties widespread in Imereti is Otskhanuri Sapere, wherefrom the highest quality red wine is made.⁵

The book "Chinchkhlebi Chikashi" (Rages in Glass) by Giorgi Abashidze, published on the occasion of 75th anniversary of Lower Sazano Winery, talks about "Otskhanuri Sapere". Among vine varieties preserved in Imereti, Otskhanuri Sapere is widespread in the village Kveda Sazano and is very late-ripening table wine variety.⁶

For centuries, in Imereti (and almost all of Western Georgia), there was a tradition of coloring white wine red, and Otskhanuri Sapere was considered the best way to color white wine red.
